The cover: Two panels from a triptych titled Go Taiheiki Shiraishi-Banashi by Utagawa Yoshitora, published by Yamadaya Shojiro in 1856.

The drama Go Taiheiki Shiraishi-Banashi (The Story of the White Go Stones of the Taiheiki) was first performed at a puppet theater in January 1780 in Edo. It was then adapted for kabuki in April of the same year. The story was set in the period of the Northern and Southern Dynasties, based on two true stories that took place during the Edo period. One was the Keian Incident in 1651, a rebellion of masterless samurai against the Tokugawa Shogunate. The other was a revenge story of two sisters who killed the samurai who killed their father. The three panels depict the major scenes of the revenge story. From the Kiseido collection.
